RAILROAD WINS COURT DECISION

Supreme Court Decided County and Township Must Share Expense

COUNTY'S SHARE IS $6,000

Lake county and the township of Warren have lost their fight with the St. Paul railroad before the state utilities commission and accordingly, in the construction of the Gurnee subway, the railroad company gets out of paying the bulk of the improvement which is a direct benefit to the company rather than to the public.

The Supreme court last week denied rehearing in the case of Dady vs the St. Paul road—and that means that the court upheld its decision as made on February 20, wherein it upheld the ruling of the utilities commission in apportioning the cost which was assessed as follows, the total cost to be about $30,000:

Lake county—20 per cent or $6,000.
Warren township—20 per cent or $6,000.

St. Paul—60 per cent or $18,000.
Warren township to stand all the costs that would come from adjacent property being damaged.

And the ruling now made whereby the hearing denied means that the improvement will proceed under the above portion of shouldering the cost. And thus Lake county and Warren township stand the burden of the improvement which is of such benefit to the railroad which has not only drawn the plans for the improvement to have it done the way they want it but which has also made its plans for providing for a four tract viaduct whereas they have but two tracks on that line through Gurnee—thus the public is paying a big share of the expense of the future expansion of the company. This one feature was one of the things which caused Warren folks to be very indignant.

When the improvement at Gurnee was agitated because of the terrible dangerous features of the crossing, the matter was taken before the state utilities commission and the commission ruled that the railroad, the township and the county would share the expense.

The county and township said the improvement was one which directly affected the railroad more than the town or county and that it was a case where the company should provide protection for the public without asking the public to help pay for that protection.

Accordingly the county ordered an appeal taken from the utilities commission ruling to the Sangamon county circuit court. It is necessary to file such cases appeal of the utilities commission in the Sangamon court in which county Springfield is located.

Sangamon court, after hearing the evidence, ruled it would reverse the decision of the utilities commission and ordered the railroad company to pay the entire improvement. The railroad company took an appeal from the Sangamon circuit court, carrying it to the supreme court which has now given its final decision wherein the railroad will save thousands of dollars as a result of the ruling which says that Lake county and Warren township must share the expense of this big and needy improvement.

Majestic Will Open in New Location Soon After May 1

The work of remodeling the Naber store into a first class show house, is being rushed as fast as possible, so that the Majestic may be in operation there very soon after May 1. When complete this will be the most up to date show house in this part of the country. The entire store front has been removed and a theater front is being built. The floor will be entirely changed and a stage built. The new gold fiber curtain recently purchased by the Majestic company will be installed and it is the intention of the management to furnish their patrons with as fine a line of pictures as can be secured.

Sailor Steals Box of Shoes; Sells Them to Dealer

Joe Koestner, a shoemaker who has a shop in the Auditorium at North Chicago, thought he struck a bargain the other day when he bought 23 pairs of shoes from a Great Lakes sailor at $3.00 a pair. They were good strong shoes such as are furnished by the navy and the sailor when he sold them to Koestner explained that because Uncle Sam had been derelict in sending him his pay he had kept on drawing shoes as fast as he could in order to get a number of pairs together so that he could sell them and get money to buy luxuries with.

But when Assistant Provost Marshal McGuire, and a squad appeared at Koestner's door Tuesday afternoon and made a search through the store and window and took possession of 23 pairs of shoes which they identified as navy shoes, and removed them to the station, Koestner agreed with the provost guard that he was entirely out of luck. In fact, he was about $69 worth out of luck, and he now is bemoaning the fact that he "fell for the story" which the sailor told him.

It seems according to the sailor in question stole a full box of shoes from one of the warehouses at the station and that was how he came into the possession of so many pairs. He apparently kept one pair for himself and sold the balance to Koestner. The sailor in question is now in arrest at Great Lakes guard house and will face a court marshal.

Claim That Signals are too Near Roads

The nearness to the road on "Stop!" signs which the railroads are placing near railroad crossings all over the county resulted in the drafting of a resolution of protest at the meeting of township highway officials held at Libertyville on last Thursday. Copies of this resolution will be sent to the state public utilities commission and also to the various railroads which run through the county.

The protest points out that the signs are being placed so close to the road that they are a menace to the traffic and interfere with the grading of roads. The following officers were elected: President—E. L. Davis, Libertyville. Vice President—Frank Dunn, Antioch. Secretary—Emil Ficke, Lake Zurich. Cor. Secretary—Chas. Russell, Waukegan.

Various road matters were taken up and decision was made as to what will be done to remedy conditions. Schedule was arranged which the three road outfits will visit various parts of the county.

A delegation from Antioch attended this meeting.

Work is Resumed on Nippersink Bridge

Work has been resumed on the new bridge across the point at Fox Lake which, when completed, will shorten the route from Chicago to Lake Geneva by over twelve miles.

Work started on the big job last fall but not a great deal was done owing to the setting in of bad weather. Now the task has been started again and a big gang of men is at work.

It is said that the whole contract is to be finished by August 1st and that the public then can make the trip to Lake Geneva via that route, a much shorter and better route than those now used.

The bridge in question is one which has been urged for many years and connects Lake and McHenry Counties at a point where it is expected that travel between the two counties will be materially increased.

DEATH OF FORMER RESIDENT

F. B. Goodrich Passed Away At His Home in Delevan on March 20

WAS 71 YEARS OF AGE

From the Delevan Enterprise of March 27, we notice three separate items all of which will be of interest to our Antioch readers inasmuch as each item concerns some member of the Goodrich families who at one time were numbered among Antioch's most progressive business men.

On the first page of the Enterprise there appeared a column article telling of the death of Mr. Fred B. Goodrich, which occurred at his home in Delevan on the twentieth of March.

In the year of 1905 he and his brother J. H. Goodrich purchased the lumber yard at this place and with their families came here to reside becoming very well acquainted with the people of this vicinity. The deceased was seventy-one years of age and had been engaged in active business up to four years ago. The funeral services were held at the residence March 22, the Masonic services being observed and the Knights Templar furnishing the escort. He is survived by his widow and three daughters, the youngest of whom is Winifred who is well known to the young people of Antioch.

On the same page of the Enterprise there appears the death notice of Mrs. E. L. van Susemlich a daughter of Mrs. J. H. Goodrich. The deceased was quite well known here on account of having visited here on many occasions. She has been a sufferer from Bright's Disease for many months and has been in the Sacred Heart sanatorium at Milwaukee since the middle of February. Her death was not unexpected. In another column of the same issue is a short item saying that Mrs. J. H. Goodrich is very ill and that she is also at the Sacred Heart sanatorium. Her condition was such that she was not told of the death of her daughter as it was feared the shock would prove too much for her.

Illinois Will Give its Fighters Bonus of $50

Springfield, Ill., April 3.—Without a dissenting voice the House committee on appropriations reported out with a recommendation that it pass, the Perkins bill appropriating $500,000 for the aid of Illinois needy war heroes.

The bill establishes a commission to distribute the fund, and will be the sole judge of applicants merits. The commission will consist of the governor as chairman, the Secretary of State, and the adjutant general, as secretary.

Edwin C. Perkins, Lincoln, author of the bill, who spent the greater portion of the afternoon before the committee seeking favorable action, said:

"Illinois furnished one-tenth of the American fighters. It ought to be proud of these boys. The federal aid promised is neither sufficient nor prompt. These are our own boys coming home. Some of them are ill and penniless and others are walking the streets looking for jobs which we took away from them."

"It is the plan of the bill to give every needy Illinois soldier $50 and give it to him at once. All he has to do is to prove his need to the commission, and he will get his money. And with the commission handling the funds, there need be no fear of it being squandered."

The bill will be reported into the House Tuesday.

Telephone Users in Victory by Court Edict

Thousand of telephone users in Illinois outside Chicago won a victory Tuesday when Judge Charles Foell of the Superior court made permanent a temporary writ, issued some time ago, restraining the Chicago Telephone company from putting into effect the increase intrastate rates ordered by Postmaster General Barlerop.

Judge Foell in his decision declares under the provisions of regulations adopted by congress July 16, 1918, intrastate phone rates are left in control of the state, and attempts on the part of the company to increase its rates over objections of the Illinois utility commission are outside of the power of the company.

Thieves Are Still Busy Among Business Houses

Some one with a "thrust for small coins seems to be running loose in Antioch and on Monday night paid a visit to Gollwitzer's barber shop and also to the depot.

At Gollwitzer's place a key was fitted to the lock, the door opened and the visitor proceeded to tap the cash till, securing for their trouble about four dollars.

At the depot the door was also opened with a key, and once inside the intruder proceeded to open the telephone coin box, the amount secured there is not known.

Senate Joins in Move to Probe Zion Affairs

Senator Swift of this district made a strong speech in favor of the investigation.

This means that the fight on Voliva is on in earnest. It shows that the overseer of Zion affairs will be investigated by the state because the house already had passed the bill in question. This was the final act of the legislature to make the investigation a certainty. The committee will now proceed to decide what line of investigation it will pursue and some exciting times are likely to follow.

THANKS TO DUANE, DAPHNE GETS THE CHANCE TO BECOME AN ACTRESS—IF SHE CAN MAKE GOOD.

Synopsis.—Clay Wimburn, a young New Yorker on a visit to Cleveland, meets pretty Daphne Kip, whose brother is in the same office with Clay in Wall street. After a whirlwind courtship they become engaged. Clay buys an engagement ring on credit and returns to New York. Daphne agrees to an early marriage, and after extracting from her money-worried father what she regards as a sufficient sum of money for the purpose she goes to New York with her mother to buy her trousseau. Daphne's brother, Bayard, has just married and left for Europe with his bride. Daphne and her mother install themselves in Bayard's flat. Wimburn introduces Daphne and her mother to luxurious New York life. Daphne meets Tom Duane, man-about-town, who seems greatly attracted to her. Daphne accidentally discovers that Clay is penniless, except for his salary. Bayard and his wife return to New York unexpectedly. The three women set out on a shopping excursion and the two younger women buy expensive gowns, having them charged to Bayard. Bayard is furious over the expense, seeing hard times ahead. Daphne, indignant, declares she will earn her own living and breaks her engagement with Clay.

CHAPTER IX.

Daphne beat her head so quickly that his pressed lips touched her hair. She flung backward and thrust him away and broke from his hold.

"Ah!" she groined. "I suppose I deserve the insult—for trusting you." "I didn't intend it for an insult." He followed her with pleading arms.

She backed away and found herself in a corner, flushed, furious, at bay. "How dare you?" she stormed, and thought with nausea how often the phrase had been used and with what hypocrisy.

It seemed to fall familiarly on his ear, for he laughed comfortably. "How can I help it?"

"If you touch me I'll—I'll hit you." He paused, stared deep into her eyes. "Do you mean it?"

"Of course I mean it."

"I'm sorry," he sighed. "But won't you let me explain?"

"You don't have to. It's all my fault for inviting you here."

"Oh, no, I beg you not to think that I'm such a cad."

"Please go!"

"All right!" he murmured, and left the room.

She heard his stick rattle as he took it from the umbrella jar. She thought: "There goes my opportunity—my career! Well, let it go! It wasn't worth the price!"

Duane appeared at the door again to say: "Oh, by the way, that introduction to Mr. Reben. Do you still want it?"

"No, thank you, not from you. Good-bye."

He bowed farewell, then changed his mind, entered the room and sat down, and motioned her to a seat as if it were his house.

"Miss Kip, may I say one word to you? I don't pretend to understand you women people. I'm not sure now just how sincere you are, just how much of a ninny you may think me for being rebuffed so easily. Experience is no guide. But—well—anyway—what I wanted to say is this—there is hardly any man that would even bother a woman unwilling to be bothered if he could only be certain that he was really bothering her. Do I make myself clear?"

"Not in the least."

"Well, then, I give up. But I must leave you a bit of advice. You say you want to earn money. If you do, false it is, or how true; no man can know—but there is a tradition that every woman expects every man to meet to offer her an insult—that's the technical term—as soon as they are alone.

"That feeling is what women are going to run into every time they try to force their way into business. It will die out, I suppose, to a certain extent, as you crowd into our field. It will be one of the last privileges you'll lose. You're already permitted to stand up in street cars and go out after dark alone. By and by you will have to make your advances to the men yourselves in the frankest manner, instead of subtly as now."

Daphne broke in coldly. "That will be a very welcome day to most of us."

Somehow it did not sound convincing to her. There was grave conviction, however, in his response:

"It will be a mighty welcome day to men haven't the faintest desire to spoon with women. It's hard enough for some of them to keep their own sweethearts and wives sufficiently caressed. Then there's another thing—

if I'm not boring you—I haven't thought of a speech since I was a school-boy and recited 'Spartacus to the Gladiators.'"

"Go on, please," said Daphne. "A woman doesn't often get the chance of hearing a man tell the truth about these things."

Her sarcasm chilled him a little, but he went on:

"I just want to say this—it's an old man's advice to a young woman going into business: when a man asks for a job he brings references, and they are investigated; or he answers a lot of questions, and he is given a trial. Or when two men meet in a club or elsewhere they shake hands. That handshake itself is a kind of investigation of character. They learn each other's politics and religion and prejudices as soon as they can."

"So when a man meets a woman he is apt to be thrown with a good deal he is apt to say, 'What sort is she?' But the thing that annoys a man most about having to do business with a woman is the fear that he will either compromise her or disappoint her. That's the first problem to get out of the way; and there's nothing easier for a woman to do than to convince a man that she doesn't want him to try to flirt with her—if she doesn't."

Daphne cried. "In heaven's name, tell me how it's done."

"The way to convince him is to be envied yourself. If you're sincere he'll know it."

"But I was sincere with you, and you didn't know it."

"I didn't know it at first, but I soon did—I think—and now that I'm driving at all this long while. If you're going into business, competition with men, play fair. Every now and then one of them, as soon as he finds himself alone with you, will be polite enough to insult you. But the average man will let you alone if you'll let him alone. Suppose he does make a mistaken advance, if you could be sensible enough not to get mad, not to feel bemuddled, but just take it as a matter of course and say frankly: 'No, thanks, I'm not interested. I understand you perfectly, but you needn't bother, or something like that, and say it honestly, the rest would be plain sailing.'"

"And now, if you'll forgive me for talking your arm off and if you'll prove it by letting me help you, I'll promise never to kiss you or try to—try to ask me to."

Daphne laughed refreshingly at his impudence, and he laughed, as well as he might. And they shook hands with comradeship.

"And may I arrange for you to meet Reben?"

"I hate to ask you now. I've no right to trouble you. But I'm terribly anxious to get a job."

"And I'm terribly anxious to get you one."

"You're awfully kind," she said, and led him to the telephone.

She felt that it would be indelicate to listen, and went back into the living room of the apartment. There Duane joined her in a few moments with the terrifying news that Reben had said that he might have a chance to place her at once if she could come to his office without delay.

Opportunity bountifully at her like a Jack-in-the-box alarmed her. But she faced it pluckily. She put on her hat with trembling hands and went down in the elevator with Duane.

They went up in an elevator at one side of the lobby of the theater and stepped out at Reben's office door. A number of somber and despondent persons of a theatrical complexion were waiting there also, the wretched Lazaruses of art.

Duane spoke to a respectful office boy, who disappeared through a door and returned to beckon him in. With heart bounding high and bubbling at her throat Daphne entered the theatrical world by one of its most gilded portals.

The great Reben sat hulkily behind an ornate table and dismissed a still more ornate stenographer with a nod as he rose to greet Duane.

Duane did the honors: "Mr. Reben, I want to present you to Miss Kip, Miss Daphne Kip."

Reben greeted her with civility and his eyes were even more enthusiastic than his words. Daphne was at her superlative degree and anxiously gave her a wistfulness that was appealing to Reben. Women's charms and wistfulness made up a large part of his wares in trade.

"Have you had any experience?"

"None."

"Studied elocution?"

"Never. I never spoke a piece in my life."

"Good! Amateur theatricals?"

"Never. I never seemed to care for them."

"Better yet! What makes you think you want to act now?"

"Money. I want to earn money—get rich."

"I see," said Reben, and fell into a profound meditation, studying Daphne scintillatingly.

Duane seized the opportunity to rise and say: "Well, I'll leave you two together to talk terms. It would be inadequate for me to know just how rich Miss Kip is going to be."

He had no sooner gone than Reben's manner changed slightly and Daphne's courage vanished. Reben paced the floor as he talked. His path kept slowly closing in around her like the walls in Poe's story.

"You look like Miss Kemble," he said. "You have somewhat the same temperament. You like her style of play. That may be your line. I can't tell. Of course I don't know how well you can act. Perhaps you never could. Kemble is great, but she comes of an old theatrical family. Of course you have one great capital—your beauty; for you are very beautiful, Miss Kip, very. Let me see your eyes!"

He had a right to ask if he were going to hire her eyes, but she looked up bravely for the burly satrap was leaning over her. His left hand was on the arm of the chair, his right on the back of it. His left hand was gradually enveloping hers. It was a fat, hot hand, and his face was so close that it was blurred in her vision.

Then she remembered Duane's words. She controlled herself enough to put them to the test.

She pretended to look coldly into Reben's face, and she said, with a brave show of calm: "Mr. Reben, I didn't come here to flirt with you and I don't intend to. I came here for a job as an actress. If this sort of thing is a necessary part of the job I'll go somewhere else."

Reben backed away and stared at her. He was rendered foolish by her rebuff and he stammered, "Why, I— I mean no harm."

She went on with the Duane system of treatment: "I know you didn't. You meant to be polite, but you don't have to be so polite to me. I don't expect it and I don't like it."

"All right, all right!" Reben growled, peeling the floor again, but in a constantly receding path. He did not speak. He felt that he had made a fool of himself, and he was embarrassed.

Daphne was so frightened with her success that she got to her feet, saying: "I suppose this means that you don't want me to work for you. It's true, then, what they say about the stage."

"Nonsense! Of course not! But I never see most of my people except at rehearsals or performances. I've never spoken to three-quarters of 'em. If you want a job you can have it, and no concessions are necessary. You don't have to make love to me. You make love to the audience, and if you can capture that you can slap my face every time you see me."

Daphne was astounded. She was engaged! She was exultant and thrilled with gratitude to Duane for introducing her to this marvelous opportunity and for the wisdom of his counsel.

Reben said: "The general understudy of the Kemble company has grown tired of waiting for a chance to appear in public. She's quitting me this week for a small part in a road company. You can have her place if you want it. Do you?"

"You bet—er—indeed I do. How often does an understudy play?"

"As rarely as possible."

Daphne's joy turned to lead.

Reben added: "But we don't pay by performances. I'll pay you twenty-five a week. You wanted money. There's a little of it for a start. Do you want it?"

"Will it lead to anything, better?"

"It might."

"Am I to understudy Miss Kemble?"

"Yes, and all the other women roles."

"And when do you suppose I'll get a chance to play Miss Kemble's part?"

"Never, I hope."

"That's encouraging!"

"It Miss Kemble tell ill we'd ordinarily refund the money, because she's the star. But sometimes we might have to give a performance at short notice. Chances in the other parts might come any day."

"And you'll give me a better chance when you can?"

"Indeed I will. If you have the gift, the sooner I fling it out and the harder I work the more money I make. The more you earn the more I make. I'd like to pay you ten thousand a week."

"I'd like to have you. All right, I'll try."

He pressed a button on his desk once, then twice. The office boy appeared, followed by the stenographer.

Reben said to the boy: "Is Mr. Batterson here? Send him to me." To the stenographer he said: "Fill out a contract for Miss Kip—Miss—What's the first name? Miss Daphne Kip. Salary, twenty-five. Make it a three-year contract."

Reben motioned her absently to her chair and said, rather for Duane's sake than for hers, she felt: "Sit down, won't you, fill the contracts come? and pardon me if I—"

He finished the phrase by the deed. The office routine went on and Daphne might have been the chair she sat in, for all the attention he paid her. She felt rather ungraciously ignored. Still, she had asked to be treated on a business basis. He was taking her at her word.

Before the contracts were ready Mr. Batterson appeared. He was one of Reben's stage managers, a worried, emotional little man, worn to shreds with his task of stimulating and correcting the emotions by which others earned their wages and fame.

Reben introduced him to Daphne and explained her new office. Batterson seemed none too well pleased with the news that Daphne was ignorant of stage work to the last degree. He had found it hard enough to make the experienced actors read their lines as they must be read and keep on reading them so. To teach this dramatic infant how to walk and talk was an unenviable labor.

He took Daphne into his office and pulled out a set of parts. When she stumbled over them he cast his eyes heavenward in his swift impatience. He explained them with a vinegary gentleness. He talked to her of the canons of interpretation. He walked through her scenes and spoke her lines for her again and again and yet again. But somehow he could not teach her.

He tried everything but beating her. He flattered her, wheedled her, parodied, satirized, rebuked her, and occasionally he cursed her. She did not rebel even against his profanity, because she had no confidence in herself to support her resistance. She felt that she was far worse than he said she was when he said she was worst. She used all her funds of resolution in keeping from throwing down the part and running away in tears. She had none left for asserting her right to politeness.

Once Daphne was out in the street again and released from the ordeal of pleasing Batterson, youth and ambition brought hope back again. Broadway at twilight was a dream with enthusiasm and she caught zest from the crowds. She was going home to study, carrying her little set of textbooks like a schoolgirl. But she felt the wings of conquest flapping at her ankles and the wheel of fortune spinning under her toes.

Her very first effort had succeeded. She was a woman with a salary. She would be no longer a parasite on any man. She had a career and a business as well as the best of them.

Her mother was at home alone. Lella had gone from that ten party to another to which Mrs. Kip was not invited. Daphne's mother greeted her with relief. She told her news with a gush of enthusiasm. It left Mrs. Kip cold, very cold.

She was a pious, church-going woman, Mrs. Kip. She had always looked upon the theater as a training school for the still lower regions. She went to plays occasionally, but usually with a feeling of dissipation and worldliness. Besides it was one thing to see plays and another to act them.

Daphne tried to reason her mother out of her backward prejudices, but she only frightened her the more. Mrs. Kip retired to her room to write an urgent telegram to her husband demanding that he come on at once and rescue his child. She always called on him in an emergency and he always responded.

Lella came home eventually full of gossip and triumph. Her Duill gown had made a tremendous success; the other women wanted to murder her.

Mrs. Kip broke in on her chronicles with the dismal announcement of Daphne's new insanity. Lella was almost as bitter in opposition as Mrs. Kip had been, but from quite another motive. Lella had aristocratic impulses and looked forward to social splendors. She would gain no help from the fact that her husband's sister was a theatrical struggler.

Daphne escaped an odious battle with her by referring to the need of close study, and retreated into her own room, locking her mother out.

She stayed there, repenting her lines over and over and trying to remember the action that went with them as Miss Kemble had played it. She had a quick memory, but the intonation of the lines gave her extraordinary difficulty.

She remembered one of Miss Kemble's most delicious effects. She came on the stage unannounced and, pausing in the doorway, smiled whimsically and said, "How do you do?" That was all—just "How do you do?" But she

As Plain as the Nose on Your Face—Just Smell It

Smokers do not have to put tobacco in their pipes to find out if they like it. They can just rub the tobacco between the palms of their hands and smell it. The nose is an infallible guide to smoking enjoyment.

All smoking tobaccos employ some flavoring "to improve the flavor and burning qualities of the leaves," to quote the Encyclopedia Britannica. Naturally, there is considerable difference in the kind of flavorings used, and the nose quickly detects this difference.

TUXEDO Tobacco uses the purest, most wholesome, and delicious of all flavorings—chocolate. And the almost universal liking for chocolate in a great measure explains the widespread popularity of TUXEDO Tobacco.

Carefully cured, old Burley tobacco, plus a dash of pure chocolate, gives TUXEDO Tobacco a pure fragrance your nose can quickly distinguish from any other tobacco. Try it and see.

Daphne's hopes of becoming a great actress receive a rude shock, but she is given a chance to show what she can do, and again it is Duane to whom she owes the chance. She is afraid of the obligation under which she is placed, but Duane assures her that she can repay him in the end.

CHAPTER X.

The next day Batterson telephoned her that he had called a rehearsal with the company. Daphne went to the theater in terror. The stage looked utterly forlorn with the actors and actresses standing about in their street clothes. Under the bright lights with the people made up and the audience in full bloom, like a vast garden, there would be impersonality and stimulation; but the present scene was as dreary as the funeral of an unpopular man.

Courage was largely a matter of her superself forcing her reluctant feet forward. A soldier ordered to leave a bombproof shelter for an advance, a playground of shrapnel, has just the struggle with his vaso-motor system that Daphne had with hers.

With the kindest smile an amiable wolf ever wore Batterson invited the dithering lamb to come to the stream and drink. Daphne came forward in a trance and heard Batterson say:

"Ladies and gentlemen—Miss Kip, our new understudy. Give her all the help you can."

Miss Kemble had graciously chosen to be present for that purpose, though the result was only to increase Daphne's embarrassment. An imitation in the presence of the living model was a double load to carry.

Daphne's hopes of becoming a great actress receive a rude shock, but she is given a chance to show what she can do, and again it is Duane to whom she owes the chance. She is afraid of the obligation under which she is placed, but Duane assures her that she can repay him in the end.

FREE CITY of STRASSBURG

An Old House in Strassburg.

STRASSBURG, from the remotest times, has revealed a love of liberty and independence which, it must be said, frequently bewildered and even disconcerted its would-be oppressors. Through its numerous vicissitudes it has retained a personality which nothing ever succeeded in destroying. Little is known of the city during the Celtic period. When the Romans invaded Gaul, they discovered on the banks of the Ill, and quite near the Illine, a small village, the strategic importance of which they immediately recognized. Perched on a relatively high hill, Argentoratum, as the Romans named this hamlet, dominated the whole of the fertile plain of Alsace and the river valley. They therefore fortified it and established there the general headquarters of the legions who were especially entrusted with the defense of the passage of the Illine. For more than three centuries this region remained under Roman domination, after which lapse of time it was conquered by a powerful Germanic tribe, the Alamanni.

For several centuries, Strassburg was subjected to the continual vicissitudes of warfare, says the Christian Science Monitor. The Franks succeeded the Alamanni and after the battle of Tolbiac in 493, Strassburg and the greater part of Alsace were Christianized by Clovis.

Under the Merovingian dynasty, Strassburg was elevated to the dignity of a royal city. The Carolingian monarchs even signed several of their celebrated charters there. However, the city itself vegetated; lack of security hindered its development, and when, in 925, Alsace was incorporated in the German empire, Strassburg was still a relatively unimportant town. It had possessed a bishopric for several centuries, and so long as its development had remained stationary, had submitted unprotestingly to the domination of the clergy. However, as the commerce developed and its industries gradually evolved, Strassburg rebelled, first timidly, then openly and successfully, against the clerical yoke.

Building the Great Cathedral.
The real prosperity of Strassburg dates from the thirteenth century, when it already numbered 50,000 inhabitants. The bishops vainly strove to retain their former supremacy by force of arms, but Strassburg defended itself with much energy and at last enjoyed a period of relative peace, during which all classes lived in harmony.

This period coincides with a great development in the fine arts. It was then that Gottfried of Strassburg, the first Alsatian poet of the middle ages, was scribe in his native town, and Erwin of Steinbach, artist and architect, undertook to build the cathedral on the site of the former basilica, erected about 670 A. D. on a spot where once stood a temple dedicated to Hercules.

The original plan of Master Erwin has not been faithfully followed, and it must be admitted that the edifice has lost nothing through this, but has rather gained considerably. He had conceived of a facade two stories in height, dominated by two towers of equal height. It was, however, many years later that the cathedral was completed, and the two towers were welded together at the height of the first story, the left tower alone being finished, its delicate openwork spire—a marvel of sculpture—rising 142 meters above the earth. The threefold portal, giving access to the three Gothic naves, is decorated by a multitude of remarkable sculptures.

The great tower was finished in 1430, under the direction of John

Holtz. Many were the artists who lovingly decorated this unique stone jewel. The baptistery was the work of John Deginger; the pulpit that of Huns Hanoverer; and laumerliche humble artisans lovingly and piously decorated and embellished it. Their anonymous tribute is touchingly revealed in the slightest details of the gigantic and splendid masterpiece.

The Astronomical Clock.
The great clock of the cathedral has been for nearly six centuries an object of public curiosity and amusement. This astronomical clock was first built by Bishop Berthold of Barchegg in 1332, and was completed two years later by Bishop John of Lichtenberg. The clock originally occupied the space facing that which it occupies at present in the southern transept. Besides various astronomical devices indicating the true solar time, it has a great planetarium in which the revolution of the planets is represented, so that the relative position of each at any time can be seen at a glance. Then, on an elevated platform, are moving figures representing the four ages of man.

On a still higher platform is a natural-sized figure of Jesus, and at noon the twelve apostles pass before the face of their master, bowing low. As Peter passes, a large and maneuverably lifelike cock flaps his wings, ruffles his feathers and crows three times very loudly and naturally. The clock was definitely completed in 1574, to be destroyed during the revolution of 1793. But in 1842, a Strassburg artist named Schwelghe built the clock which still exists and is a faithful copy of the old timepiece.

Houses of the Renaissance.

During the Renaissance, Strassburg enjoyed a prosperity of which some idea can be gained from the numerous monuments which were erected at that period. Many of these still exist, especially those old houses which abound in the little narrow streets in the neighborhood of the cathedral, where many picturesque old signboards bear evidence to the past. The Bockelin house, which once belonged to a noble family of lower Alsace, is among the most celebrated of this period. The courtyard of this house contains a magnificent stone staircase and it also possesses a particularly fine Renaissance doorway. The House of the Crow, dating from the fourteenth century, is famous for its remarkable courtyard, and it is said that Frederick the Great lodged there in 1740. The House of the Dragon, recently demolished, was in the fourteenth century the residence of the Knights of Endingen, whilst the famous Kamezell house on the Cathedral place, dating from 1407, is of world-wide renown. Its three stories were built at successive periods, but coiffed with its high shingled roof, so characteristic of Strassburg, it rather resembles an immense dove-cote with its many windows.

During the thirty years' war, Alsace fell under the rule of France; Strassburg became French on the 30th of September, 1681, whilst the annexation was definitely ratified by the Peace of Ryswick in 1697. Vauban personally directed the construction of the citadel in 1682. But his fortifications, strong as they were, could not resist the intensely terrific bombardment to which the Germans subjected the old city in August and September, 1870, and Strassburg was obliged to capitulate after barely a month's resistance. During the shelling of the city, many of its finest public edifices which were for the most part of the eighteenth century, were destroyed. Amongst these figured the magnificent

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promise of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like so endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it. A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism. You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by sending a postcard to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

Starving in the Midst of Plenty

Acid-Stomach Steals Strength and Good Feelings From Millions

One of the worst features of acid-stomach is that very often it literally starves its victims in the midst of plenty. And the strange thing about it is that the people with acid-stomachs seldom know what their trouble really is.

No matter how good or wholesome the food may be, or how much they eat, they do not gain in strength. This is clearly explained by the fact that an acid-stomach cannot properly digest food. Instead of healthy, normal digestion, the excess acid causes the food to sour and ferment. Then when this mass of sour, fermented food, churned with excess acid, passes into the intestines, it becomes the breeding place for all kinds of germs and toxic poisons, which in turn are absorbed into the blood and in this way distributed throughout the entire body. And that is exactly why it is that so many thousands of people eat and eat and keep on eating and yet are literally starving in the midst of plenty. Their acid-stomachs make it absolutely impossible for them to get the full measure of nourishment out of their food. And it doesn't take long for this poor nourishment to show its ill effects in a weakened, emaciated body.

You may say: "My stomach doesn't hurt me." That may be true because many victims of acid-stomach do not actually suffer stomach pains. Then again, there are millions who do suffer all kinds of aches and pains—headaches, rheumatic twinges, gout, lumbago, pains around the heart and in the chest—who never dream that an acid-stomach is the real cause of the trouble. Naturally, the sensible thing to do is to strike right at the very cause of this trouble and clean the excess acid out of the stomach. There is a quick, easy way to do this. A wonderful new remedy quickly removes the excess acid without the slightest discomfort. It is EATONIC. Made in the form of tablets—they are good to eat—just like a bit of candy. They literally absorb the injurious excess acid and carry it away through the intestines. They also drive the blast out of the body—in fact you can fairly feel it work. Make a test of EATONIC in your own case today. Get a big box of EATONIC from your druggist. See for yourself how surely it brings quick relief in those painful attacks of indigestion, bitter heartburn, belching, disgusting food repelling, that awful bloated, lumpy feeling after eating and other stomach ills. Banish all your stomach troubles so completely that you forget you have a stomach. Then you can eat what you like and digest your food in comfort without fear of distressing after effects.

If EATONIC does not relieve you, it will not cost you one penny. You can return it to your druggist and get your money back. So if you have the slightest question about your health—if you feel you are not getting all the strength out of your food—if you are not feeling tip-top, ready for your work, full of vim and vigor—do give EATONIC a fair trial this very day and see how much better you will feel.

ALLOWANCE TO CHILD IS ROAD TO ECONOMY

Home Economics Expert Says Way Is to Teach Youth Early Proper Apportioning of an Income.

"The best and most natural way of beginning true national economy, wise spending and wise saving," says Ruth Wardell, head of the home economics department of the University of Iowa, and who last summer started a home economics department in a Cleveland (Ohio) bank, "is by giving the children an allowance. The lesson of properly apportioning an income thus is early learned."

Miss Wardell favors the allowance arrangement at a very early age, say at six or seven. It may then be very small, and out of it the budding citizen may be expected to provide only school pencils, tablets, etc. The purchase of school books provides a logical next step; a little later some personal belongings, such as shoes, may be added.

"I say shoes," explains Miss Wardell, "because children seem to take more interest in shoes than in most articles of wearing apparel, and because shoes represent a highly important item to which children frequently pay little heed."

The allowance should provide a little margin to encourage careful buying and saving possibilities. It should not necessitate so much care or thought as to burden the growing youngster. It should never, under normal circumstances, be "helped out" by irregular gifts or expected to cover other than the recognized items. The allowance, with its purchasing responsibilities, should be increased gradually, steadily. By the time high school is reached the boy or girl should be buying practically all his or her own clothes.

Miss Wardell tells an interesting story of a boy who called upon her in Cleveland, telling her of his manner of apportioning the rather generous allowance made by his father. He knew to a penny what every article he wore had cost him; he was intelligent regarding relative textile and wearing values; he saved steadily, systematically, with joy.

A Chicago mother started her little daughter out, similarly, at eight years old and at sixteen the girl was a better buyer than she was. These children were well started on the road to fine and self-respecting and independent citizenship. Both will enter college with a nice little financial nest egg to await the beginning of their business or professional life.

The child's allowance, it may be added, should be for necessities mainly, with but a fair and modest margin for personal luxuries and pleasures. It should always be recognized as allowing for a regular proportion of savings, preferably invested in governmental securities. It should be carefully adjusted, rigidly adhered to on both sides of the bargain. Such respect and observance not only will teach the child good economic habits, but will abolish many too frequent annoyances for the financial head of the family.

Each child given an allowance will understand that this sum, with his support and other parental provisions, represents his fair share of the family income, and that, as a decent citizen, he must not ask nor expect to exceed it. An adequate allowance system, moreover, will obviate the evil habit of crying or pleading for special indulgences and more funds.

Diamonds? Why Not W. S. S.?
Diamonds to the value of $2,000,000, 000—more than half the available world supply and value—are owned in the United States of America.

Pretty things, diamonds, fascinating to watch, pleasing to wear, of high commercial value. Diamond prices rise every now and again, truly, but the rate of increase cannot be precisely calculated, and the risk of owning diamonds is large—unless they're tucked away in the safety deposit vaults where no one ever sees them.

Now $2,000,000,000 invested in government securities, War Savings Stamps, for example, would mean much better times for the country. Why not, for the sweet girl graduate, the bride, wife to be honored, War Savings Stamps instead of a diamond? Bright thought! The War Savings Stamps now and the diamond five years later—out of the War Savings Stamps profits when they mature.

PEACE BY EASTER SAY THE ENVOYS

Two Weeks More Required to Revise Treaty, Says Correspondent.

LLOYD GEORGE IN STATEMENT

Declares the Great Congress is Nearing the End—Asks Public to Have Patience and Not Judge Work Now.

Paris, April 8.—"Peace by Easter or bust" is the current slogan here, meaning that the allies must agree and summon the German delegates by April 20. Two weeks more are required for putting together and revising the entire treaty.

No final judgment was reached at Saturday's discussions of the question as to how the damages done by the Germans are to be repaired, but the differences of opinion, it is understood, have been whittled down almost to the vanishing point.

The same holds true of the Rhine frontier problem, previous decisions on which are now being modified by experts.

The biggest question at issue remains that of the Atlantic, but on this, too, optimists are confident the negotiations will reach an agreement before the end of the ensuing week.

What course shall be pursued toward the German delegates when they finally come to Paris is as yet undecided. Some predict they will be allowed to discuss every point, which would probably take as long as it took the allies to agree.

Others think the practice observed in the armistice negotiations will be followed, which would mean the enemy plenipotentiaries would be allowed to make a few observations and then be told "please sign."

This much seems certain: If the Germans are to be allowed to discuss everything new disclosures would ensue among the allies with regard to concessions, and in that case peace would be extremely remote.

One of the big events of the coming week will be a meeting of the full commission on the league of nations, at which the revised covenant will be discussed, together with changes covering the Monroe doctrine and race equality.

Let public opinion wait another fortnight. We are nearing the end," Lloyd George is quoted as saying in an interview with a representative of Le Matin.

"Agreement will not be long in coming on all questions concerning Germany," continues the British premier. "The peace preliminaries will be ready by Easter."

"But why," asked the interviewer, "should not the amount of the war bill, whatever it may be, be submitted to Germany before anything else, and why should she not be compelled to reimburse her debt?"

"Who says we have not decided that?" was Lloyd George's reply. "Can't people wait until we have finished? Can't people judge our work instead of seeking always to judge our intentions? This conference has had to meet and discuss matters under conditions without precedent in history. All eyes are turned toward it and, what is more serious still, all ears are listening at the door. The enemy's ears tingle with joy when they think they observe some hesitation, while the ears of our friends, who hear only confused rumors, interpret them badly."

"Let public opinion wait a few more days and it will then be able to form an opinion, not on rumors, but on facts."

DEMANDS HELD MODERATE

Germans Not Dissatisfied Over America's Claim for War Indemnity.

Berlin, April 8.—America's demands for an indemnity were much more moderate than Belgium's, France's or Britain's, according to the North German Gazette. Germany could not possibly pay $15,000,000,000, the newspaper states, adding that Germany is already exposed to bolshevism and starvation because of the allied blockade.

British Fear U. S. Competition.
London, April 8.—The Morning Post, commenting on conditions in the British motor industry and American competition, says: "So soon as importation is permitted, Americans will fill the British market with inexpensive and serviceable cars. The result will be that the British motor industry will be ruined."

Liberty Motor Total 20,478.
Washington, April 8.—Production of the Liberty airplane engines for the army reached a total of 20,478, final deliveries having been made by the manufacturers during the week ending March 21.

GERMANS FIGHT REDS

GOVERNMENT ARMY RUSHED TO ATTACK BOLSHEVIKI.

Send Troops to Frankfurt Through Neutral Zone With Consent of French.

Coblentz, April 4.—German troops opposite the Coblenz bridgehead are working toward Frankfurt, where a Spartacist revolt has been causing disorder.

Before entering Frankfurt, which is in the neutral zone beyond the French bridgehead, based on Mayence, the German military authorities had to obtain permission from the French Tenth army.

According to information reaching American headquarters here, the trouble in Frankfurt became serious Tuesday. The workmen formed groups in the streets and eventually a mob of more than 10,000 began parading through the streets. The mob stormed a large warehouse and the members helped themselves to the food stored there. Hundreds filled baskets and sacks with food of various kinds.

Street fighting followed an attempt by the local authorities to gain control of the situation. The German troops opposite the American bridgehead were then called on for help.

Disorder continues in a number of German cities. The Vossische Zeitung says the Stuttgart streets are filled with great crowds and that there has been some shooting.

HOLD RHINE UNTIL FOE PAYS

French and Belgian Troops Will Hold Territory After Peace Treaty Is Signed.

Paris, April 4.—The council of four has virtually decided, according to information from French sources, that the left bank of the Rhine will be neutralized until Germany has paid the indemnities fixed by the peace conference.

It is understood that French and Belgian troops will hold this territory, the United States claiming it to be impossible to leave American troops in Europe after the signature of the peace treaty, and England having insufficient effective troops to maintain garrisons along the Rhine.

It is surmised that the visit of King Albert of Belgium to Paris was not unconnected with the share that Belgium troops will be asked to undertake in this territory.

YANKS IN PERIL NEAR ARCHANGEL

American and Allied Troops Face Massacre in Northern Russia.

REGION SAID TO BE ICE-BOUND

Entente Columns Attacked by Overwhelming Army Which Vows to Drive Them Into Sea—Ice Cuts Off Retreat.

London, April 5.—The American and allied troops in the ice-bound areas of the Archangel region are in grave danger. This is the word from the war office here.

The forces in Archangel, which include between 3,000 and 4,000 Americans, mostly from Michigan and Wisconsin, are being attacked by a bolshevik army of overwhelming strength, which has vowed to drive them into the sea.

The retreat of the allied and American army is blocked by the Arctic winter and the bolsheviks apparently are determined to exterminate them if possible before spring permits reinforcements already congregating at Archangel to reach the front.

Archangel, April 5.—Repeated bolshevik attacks along the front line and both the right and left flank positions controlling Odozerskaya were repulsed by allied forces.

The Americans, French, British and Russians who, either separately or together, are holding positions throughout this territory, which is a little over 100 miles south of Archangel, have everywhere held their lines intact.

The bolsheviks, in spite of their heavy losses, attacked the railroad front south of Odozerskaya at ten o'clock in the morning, but they failed.

Allied forces east of Bolshoi Ozer, where Americans, Russians and British are fighting, were under attack all day at a point about fifteen miles west of Odozerskaya and four separate assaults were made there again early in the morning.

All broke down under the allied fire. According to bolshevik prisoners, the enemy is somewhat demoralized because of his heavy losses during the last two days.

London, April 5.—The bolsheviks delivered an attack on the Archangel front without artillery preparation during the last forty-eight hours, but were beaten off with a fair amount of losses, according to news received here. The allies' losses were slight. The attack occurred at Bolshoi Ozer.

Paris, April 5.—The situation in the Archangel region in northern Russia has been forcibly brought to the attention of the peace conference by the publication in Paris of the British statement that the troops in the Murmansk and Archangel districts were in danger of extermination unless they were speedily re-enforced. Brig. Gen. W. P. Richardson, U. S. A., is on his way to take command of the American forces in north Russia and is expected to reach Murmansk with 200 soldiers in a few days. There is apparently no change, however, in the avowed intention to take the American troops out of the region at the earliest possible date.

MORE YANKS SENT TO RUSSIA

Situation Causes Anxiety—British Troops Will Follow Americans Now on the Way.

London, April 4.—The situation in the Murmansk region of northern Russia is giving the British military authorities considerable anxiety. Announcement was made that British reinforcements will follow immediately the American troops now on the way to North Russia.

TRANSPORT TOWED TO PORT

New York, April 5.—The transport Scranton, reported in distress with rudder trouble 900 miles east of Sandy Hook on March 27, while on the way to Trest, has been towed into this port by naval tugs.

Three of the Scranton's crew lost their lives in the capsizing of a small boat when trying to carry a line to the transport El Sol, which stood by until tugs were summoned.

"TIME TO GIVE ISLANDS INDEPENDENCE," SAYS BAKER.

Secretary Tells Members of Special Mission of Legislature He Speaks for the President.

Washington, April 7.—Members of the special mission of the Philippine legislature here seeking immediate independence for the islands, were told by Secretary Baker that he spoke President Wilson's mind when he said he believed the time had come to grant the complete independence desired by the Filipino people.

The war secretary also said he believed the mission would be able to carry home word that the American people loved liberty too dearly to deny it to others.

He read a letter sent by President Wilson when he went to Europe, expressing the hope that the mission would result in "bringing about the desirable ends set forth in the joint resolution of the legislature."

MEXICO FRIENDLY TO ALIENS

Carranza Government Alters Front Toward Foreign Capital—Washington Interested.

Washington, April 5.—Private and official advice from Mexico City within the last few days are interpreted as clearly indicating a sudden change in sentiment in the republic toward foreign investments in Mexico, and that the coming session of congress will clear the atmosphere of much of the hostility shown since the adoption of the 1917 constitution. Diplomatic circles and officials of the state department are much interested in this apparent change of front, as manifested in newspaper editorials and in statements by members of the Mexican congress which have been telegraphed here. The American oil interests in Mexico, it was learned, have not received from the stand originally taken that their vested rights in Mexico must be recognized and that the anti-foreign and confiscatory features of the new constitution must not operate ex-post facto against them.

From recent advice it appears the new attitude of the Mexican people, at least—and it is believed in official circles that this attitude is inspired by the government—is to recognize the rights of the people, including foreigners, to their vested rights under international law.

Jersey City, N. J., April 5.—A verdict awarding $413,390 for damages arising out of the disastrous Black Tom island explosion in New York harbor in July, 1916, was given by the supreme court here in favor of B. H. Howell, Son & Co., New York sugar refiners, against the Lehigh Valley Railroad. The Howell firm lost sugar stored in Lehigh warehouses here.

LESSON ENDED RIGHT THERE

Third Answer to His Question Must Have Left School Superintendent Gasping for Breath.

Superintendent of Schools Shleis of Los Angeles, while endeavoring to teach a class of boys the composition of sentences, said to them:

"If I ask you 'What have I in my hand?' you must not answer 'chalk,' but compose a complete sentence such as, 'You have a piece of chalk in your hand.' Now we will continue."

"What have I on my feet?" "Boots," was the homedated answer. "Wrong, you haven't listened to my directions."

"Socks," answered another heedless one. "Wrong again; worse than ever," protested Shleis in exasperation.

"Well?" as another pupil raised his hand. "Please, sir," then he paused. Perhaps he thought his answer might seem funny, but convinced that it was right, he gasped out recklessly, "corns!"

Kidding Himself.
"That fellow Jones is plumb crazy kidding himself."

"How's that?" "Why, making excuses for himself—bolstering himself with pretense. For instance, the other night he came in at 12 o'clock. He didn't want to lie to his wife, so he turned the hall clock over on its side to make it look like a quarter of nine, and went to bed conscientiously."

Ought to Know the Lady.
Bank Teller—I'm sorry, but I cannot cash this check until you are identified. Is there anyone nearby whom you know?

The Lady—Certainly. I've got the baby out in front in the go-cart. I'll bring him right in.—Judge.

SHOULD HAVE KNOWN BETTER

Impertinent Guest Made Great Mistake in Engaging in Controversy With Hetty Waitress.

"A guest came bolging out of the dining room yesterday with rivulets and rills of ketchup coursing down his face," related the landlord of the Petunia tavern, "and yelling that he had been assassinated or misconstrued or something. 'Peared like he had bit onto a tack in his fritters, and when he chided Syphilis, the hetty when he chided Syphilis, the hetty over him. Also, he wanted to know what I was going to do about it. 'Well, Mr. Holler,' says I, 'when you found a tack in your fritters it was an accident, but when you talked so that she smushed the ketchup on your head to a young lady who served her apprenticeship as a waitress on a boarding car for a railroad construction gang, that was contributory negligence, and I can't do anything for you except to hand your bill to you and wish you well on your journey.'—Kansas City Star."

Reduced in Rank.
Because the newly commissioned major looked like ready money the porter had been very active in his attentions. His movements were of the "hot-foot" variety whenever the officer appeared to require service. Also he was careful to address the major as "gl'n'ral." And when the train neared the Union depot and, following the assiduous use of the brush, the sable servitor discovered himself in the possession of a dime, he was equal to the emergency. He clicked his heels together, saluted and remarked: "Cor'ral, Ah ('rank yo', sub.—Argo point."

Easily Done.
"How can you prove he is a man of loose habits?" "I can do it from the way he gets tight."

The thing that makes a bulldog famous is that he hangs on like grim death to the end.
